II. LITERATURE REVIEW

I. The Theory of Community Participation

Participation is associated as participation, community involvement and togetherness in a particular activity, either directly or indirectly, since of ideas, formulation of policies and the implementation of the program with the involvement of mental, mind and morals. According Suryono (2010: 255) there are three important elements in participation, namely:

1) Participation is a mental engagement and feeling, more than solely or just bodily involvement.
2) Willingness to give something a contribution to the business goals of the group, this means there is a sense of fun, a willingness to help the group.
3) In participation should be a responsibility, this responsibility is an element that stands out in terms of the sense of being a member.

From the above discussion it is clear that participation concerning the involvement of self and not only physical involvement through the Allocation of Village Funds under construction. Participation referred to in this discussion means that members of the public also bears the burden of establishing. Participation is the active involvement of community members since the formation of the decision to determine the societal goals and the allocation of resources to achieve these objectives, as well as in the implementation of the programs voluntarily and also in the utilization of the results of a program or project (in accordance with the principles namely the development of uniform distribution of the results of development). Direct participation means community members involved to provide power assistance in the activities undertaken. While the indirect participation of financial support, ideas and materials needed.

II. Theory Society

Society is a group of humans who have customs, traditions, attitudes, and feelings of the same union. While empowerment is a concept that summarizes the economic development of social values. This concept reflects the new development paradigm that is "people-centered, participatory, empowering, and sustainable". With regard to the meaning of the concept of community empowerment, Ife (2008) states that: Empowerment is a process of helping disadvantaged groups and individual to Compete more Effectively with other interests, by helping them to learn and use in lobbying, using the media, engaging in political action, understanding how to 'work the system' and so on.

Community empowerment can be influenced by internal factors and external factors. Hikmat (2006) describes some of the internal factors that hinder the empowerment among others: less able to trust each other, lack of innovativeness / creativity, easily surrender / surrender / despair, the aspirations and ideals of the low, unable to postpone enjoy the work, insight narrow, is highly dependent on government assistance, is very attached to his residence and was not able to / not willing to put yourself as others.

Community empowerment and participation is a strategy in the paradigm of development focused on people (people centered development). This strategy is aware of the importance of community capacity to increase the independence and internal forces, through the ability to carry out internal control over material resources and non-material significance through the redistribution of capital or ownership. Empowerment aims to find new alternatives in community development.

Community empowerment is always associated with the concept of independence, participation, networking, and justice. Independently means that people can meet their needs (either individually or collectively) through the work done and not rely on others. Networking is a framework for cooperation made by all stakeholders so the construction does not harm any party and can give uneven results which is the concept of justice (equitable welfare). Participation can be defined as the participation of all related parties including the community itself. People are given the opportunity to participate in planning, implementing, evaluating and preserve it.

Empowerment of community will fail without realizing the importance of involving the cultural dimension and use it. With the empowerment hoped that the people have a culture proactive to progress together, get to know themselves and their environment and have a responsible attitude and position itself as a subject in development efforts in the environment. From the description above, in the planning and execution of the Allocation of Village Funds indispensable participation of citizens the participation of energy, thoughts and participation budget. As well as transparency, accountability, and equality of all parties involved in the policy of both policy makers, policy implementers, and target groups, in order to create good governance.

III. Allocation of Village Funds

One of the strategies the government to increase public participation in the process of rural development is to provide capital assistance for the implementation of development programs in the form of Village Allocation Fund, which is a financial balance between central and local governments. Village Allocation Fund is a manifestation of the fulfillment of the right to hold the village of village autonomy. This was done so that the village can grow and develop to follow the growth coming from the village itself by virtue of diversity, participation, genuine autonomy, democratization and community empowerment.

Purpose of providing the Allocation of Village Funds is a stimulant assistance or incentive to encourage funds to finance village government program supported by the participation of community self-help mutual assistance in performing activities of government and community empowerment. Assistance in the implementation of the Allocation of Village Funds. Based on the understanding of Allocation of Village Funds, then in doing a planning and implementation of the necessary participation, transparency, accountability, and equality of all parties involved in the policy of both policy makers, policy implementers, and target groups. This is done in order to create good governance

Allocation of Village Funds in titikberatkan on community development, that are expected to push the handling of some of the problems faced by the community independently without having to wait for the programs of the government. The fund allocation could spur their participatory planning is more sustainable for the public could make it happen. With the funding is expected progress in terms of both physical development and in terms of capacity building for village officials.

Management Allocation of Village Funds village in the Village Merduati divided into 4 (four) stages: planning, implementation, oversight and accountability.
