ABSTRACT

what will literature—and arts and humanities in general—do in a global pandemic? Not abundant, some would say; tons, others could insist.

I don't have a solution to such a posh question. But, ever since the beginning of the COVID-19 pandemic, I actually have written journals and dissertation, so kick-starting my career by pursuing PhD in English. The fast-evolving pandemic condition offers me a way of urgency to write down quickly and share my thoughts and feelings with others. My new writing expertise raises attention-grabbing questions on the role of literature—and arts and humanities overall—in a world crisis. Indeed, the present COVID-19 pandemic discourse has been dominated by politicians and public health consultants. Who would need to pay attention to arts and humanities scholars point out the importance of literature and art? As teachers and students, what will we say concerning the present pandemic?

Whereas these are huge queries that can't be answered in an exceedingly short article, I will at least share my analysis as a scholar, concerning and through the pandemic to Illustrate: Role of Art and Literature at the time of Global Crisis.

I. ART & LITERATURE

Art is an expression of power and imagination. It's additionally a relationship between the creator and also the audience. Literature is art that shares a story and develops a subject for the audience.

As an art, literature can be described as the organization of words to offer pleasure. However through words literature elevates and transforms expertise on the far side "mere" pleasure. Literature additionally functions more broadly in society as a way of each criticizing and affirming cultural values. Literature may be a style of human expression.

According to the primary theory, art and literature area unit solely meant to form stunning or amusing works to please and entertain individuals and artists themselves, and that they aren't meant to propagate social concepts. If art and literature is used for propagating social concepts it ceases to be art and becomes information.

Literature reflects each actual historical events and also the culture of nation. You'll be able to tell what existence is like through literature during an approach like no different. You find out about their technology, what they care regarding, prejudices and hopes and fears. It additionally shows what the culture needs from itself.

I think art these days isn't simply draws and things like that, art is dance, songs, movies, games, sports, and everything that create individuals happy may be a form of art to me. Art is extremely subjective, it depends on every person's perspective. I believe that art is extremely vital to society these days as a result of it helps to develop people's creative thinking.

Growing recognition of the importance of the arts and humanities in addressing the most important problems with our times. From global climate change and gathering pressure on natural resources to world conflict and human rights, science and technology alone can give solely a part of the solution.

II. ROLE OF ART & LITERATURE AT HE TIME OF GLOBAL CRISIS LIKE COVID-19

This report examines the advanced role of the humanities throughout the COVID-19 pandemic. Perennial lockdowns, social distancing, unwellness management restrictions and alternative guidance since March 2020 introduced a series of paradoxes and challenges within the art and literature sectors.

On the opposite hand, venue closures and job losses considerably discontinuous the cultural industries. However, the pandemic additionally provided new opportunities for home-based art engagement as well as digital arts activities, on-line art & literature teams.

As the pandemic long across late 2022 into 2021, hybrid models of engagement and socially distanced engagement emerged and since Gregorian calendar month 2021, the reopening of society has provided additional freedom for the art and literature industries.

However, this reopening has additionally highlighted that the humanities and literature sectors has to evolve and adapt if it's to be property in a very post – COVID world. The paradoxes and challenges extended to audiences too. While the pandemic has shown new audiences will be reached, sustaining them may be a larger challenge. A final contradiction relates to health and well-being. Although, the pandemic has caused vital economic and psychological hardships, significantly for those operating within the arts and cultural sector, many folks turned to the humanities and literature as a significant suggests that of handling the challenges of the pandemic. The role of the humanities and literature in supporting these challenges is consequently additionally ever-changing.
